Today's global executives and other high-profile individuals are faced with unprecedented corporate and personal risks requiring a higher level of security planning, coordination and management. T&M understands that clients require personal protection that does not impede on the protectee's lifestyle. Under the direction of Joe Russo, the former U.S. Secret Service Special Agent in Charge who led the protection detail for former President Bill Clinton and former U.S. Senator Hillary Clinton, T&M offers a full range of discreet, personal and professional services designed to minimize risk while maximizing protection and mobility.

The Challenges:

- Many senior executives and business leaders are frequently under-protected in light of the critical value they bring to their organizations and the potential threats to which they inherently become exposed
- Similarly, high-net worth individuals often do not fully recognize that their wealth and prominence may expose them and their families as potential targets for criminal acts such as kidnapping, extortion and robbery
- The sophistication and determination of potential adversaries who would exploit such exposures of these persons, their organizations or their families is unprecedented
- Despite such concerns, many executives and high-net worth individuals are reluctant to engage personal protection services because they want to retain privacy and a lifestyle of free movement
- The need for executives and high-net worth individuals to move swiftly and securely throughout today's global business arena often overburdens the capabilities and resources of most corporate security departments

T&M offers discreet personal protection services to minimize risk while maximizing safety and mobility

Benefits of T&M:

T&M meets these challenges by providing our corporate and private clients with a full range of discreet, personal and professional executive protection services. Our Executive Protection division has extensive experience and maintains a global network of affiliations with proven security partners that enable us to provide protective services throughout the world. T&M works with each client to coordinate and develop a customized security plan for domestic and international visits and for corporate and special event security.
