Never have companies and individuals had a more compelling need to practice thorough due diligence before undertaking acquisitions, mergers, investments or partnership agreements. High profile corporate and investment scandals, including fraud, money laundering and Ponzi schemes, are uncovered almost daily. T&M's Global Investigations and Risk Management division, FIA (Forensic Investigative Associates), draws on its extensive worldwide connections within law enforcement, regulatory and prosecutorial agencies to provide expertise in uncovering hidden liabilities and risks in business and investment practices that aid companies and individuals in making informed decisions that protect their assets and reputations. In addition, organizations under court decree or regulatory scrutiny that are in need of a balanced and effective monitor can turn to FIA to audit current operations and design and implement best practices that will bring the corporation into compliance with regulators.

The Challenge:

- Obtaining the reliable, accurate and comprehensive information necessary to make informed decisions about acquisitions, mergers, investments and partnership agreements.
- Finding the specialized expertise needed to perform thorough due diligence, including reputation audits, records authentication, review of civil litigation, bankruptcy proceedings, SEC filings, print and electronic media reports, judgment indices, international executive employment records and background checks.
- Securing proven monitorship services to companies under regulatory or court decree that provide internal compliance with policies and procedures, laws and regulations, settlement agreements, court orders and regulatory decrees.

Recent financial scandals compel executives to practice thorough due diligence to mitigate risk
